The sale for the benefit of the "Practical Christian," the remainder of which was to be sent to Boston, was postponed on account of "the financial troubles." The writer is therefore sending only what she herself and her daughter have been able to prepare. Tragaedia von Julio und Hyppolita.

(22) ff. 27 x 21 cm.

The play from which this transcript was made (for J. O. Halliwell-Phillipps) is to be found in Englische Comedien und Tragedien, 1620, reprinted in 1624. There is a reprint from the edition of 1620 in A. Cohn's Shakespeare in Germany...[4591.3; G.4071.22; G.4071.23].

The plot of this play strongly resembles that of Shakespeare's Two gentlemen of Verona.

To Mrs. Maria (Weston) Chapman

«New York» Offers for publication in the Liberty Bell a poem (?) "The Vision of the Branded Hand." A rejection would merely be taken as "a gentle hint that it should be left to our 'young men' to 'see visions', & to us 'old men' to 'dream dreams'."

To Mrs. Maria (Weston) Chapman No.10

«Lunenburg, Mass.» The writer seeks advice in respect to anti-slavery work. Lunenburg is one of the most backward towns in the county. At an anti-slavery convention held June last, only six citizens were present, besides the writer's family. Only a year ago, the writer was herself willfully ignorant and prejudiced against abolitionists or Garrison, but the first anti-slavery lecture she heard convinced her of the truth. The writer has little confidence in her own ability to go forward, and does not sympathize with unchristian denunciations. Since the writer has become an abolitionist, "the Bible is a new book" to her. Asks [illegible] addressee to send various anti-slavery publications.

To Elizabeth (Pease) Nichol No.43

«Kimberton, (Pa.?)» Thinks that her last letter must have been on board the President, a ship recently reported missing. Hopes that the contentions among the Abolitionists will end before the World's Anti-Slavery Convention starts. Lucretia Mott and others left the Yearly Meeting of the Quakers to go to the annual Anti-Slavery meeting in New York. The Quakers dismissed their Anti-Slavery committee. The New Organizationists also held their anniversary meeting last week. Tells of Joseph Sturge meeting Nathaniel Colver at a social gathering at which C. C. Burleigh, Lucretia Mott and I. Winslow were also present. Describes Colver and Sturge. Mentions a man named Candler, [illegible]end of Sturge. Was pleased to hear of C. L. Remond's suc[illegible] abroad. Sturge wanted the women delegates to stay away from the World Convention. Com-

To Whom?

[Liverpool, (England)] "It is 'no go' to day ... so we have time to say a few more 'last words' ... The under currents of New Organization, have been undermining, even, the independence of poor Haydon the painter ..." Criticises the arrangement of the people portrayed in Haydon's picture. Garrison wanted to be "placed among the women!!!" Wants the addressee to correct the impression that all the subscribers to the Emancipator transferred their allegiance to the new owners. J. G. Whittier likes the New Organizationists, but can't bring himself to join the group.

[Kimberton] Has been kept busy arguing with Quakers about their hostility to Lucretia Mott, and describing the places she saw on her trip to England. Describes the autumn countryside. Wished that Maria (W.) Chapman had been in England to oppose N. Colver. Discusses W. H. Harrison and M. Van Buren, the Presidential candidates. "Even ... Bradburn has blown a blast at Garrison ... Gookin, Daniel, 1612-1687.

To the honorable General Court. (Contemporary copy?)

[Cambridge.] A memorandum of Indian children put forth into service to the English, being of those Indians that came in with John Sachem of Packachooge, with the names and age of the children and the names of their relations and the places where they belonged and the names of the persons with whome they were placed. The terms and conditions upon which they are to serve is to be ordered by the General Court who are to provide that the children be religiously educated and taught to read English.

There follows a list of thirty-two Indian children put out to service with twenty-three persons. The document is probably a contemporary copy as the handwriting does not resemble Daniel Gookin's. It has been prin[illegible]in the New England Historical and Genealogical Register f[illegible]e year 1854. Vol. 8. P.272.

To Caroline Weston

«Detroit» The writer is nostalgic for her friends in the Abolition cause. A society of gentlemen in Detroit professes to be interested in the slave, but little is done. The writer's husband is not as interested as formerly. "Since he left Boston he has changed his religious sentiments ... His attention is all enlisted on the side of politics." Reflects on the paradoxes of professed democracy that does not extend to the slave, and the concern of Christians for heathens in foreign lands while they "neglect even to pray for those who are in worse than heathenish darkness." The writer would like to correspond with the [illegible]dressee, and asks for Anti-Slavery tracts. Is happy to [illegible] that the writer's sister is one of the addressee's pupi[illegible]
